

Belmont Shuttle Study

Nelson\Nygaard was hired by the City of Belmont to assess the feasibility of creating a local shuttle service that could complement the regional transit services being provided by SamTrans. The study included an intercept survey of residents, a comprehensive neighborhood-by-neighborhood assessment of transit opportunities and constraints, a financial plan (including capital and operating components), stakeholder interviews, and a service plan with several alternatives to address up to nine potential markets. Most of the alternatives centered around service to/from the local Caltrain commuter rail station. Nelson\Nygaard also explored opportunities to provide joint shuttle services with the neighboring jurisdictions of San Mateo and San Carlos.

Project Duration: 2003

Total Budget: $50,000
